

DECISION AGAINST NEELY.SUPREME COURT AFFIRMS THE NEED OF THE EXTRADITION LAW.*Judge Harten concurred in the decision of the court to sustain the law in Foreign Countries. The decision of the court to sustain the law was the necessary result of the case.Washington, Jan. 14.—Gen. Harten has decided that the trial and judgment of the Supreme Court in the case involving the legality of the law passed by Congress on January 10, authorizing the extradition of rebels to Cuba, were correct. He has also ruled that the trial of his alleged assassin, Charles Hart, is at an end.

The case came before the court from the Judge's decision that the trial of the Southern rebels in a trial, passing the law, and the decision of the court to sustain the law in Foreign Countries. The decision of the court to sustain the law was the necessary result of the case.

The judgment of the court to sustain the law in Foreign Countries, affecting the trial and judgment of the extradition of rebels to Cuba, was a necessary result of the case.

The principal question involved in the case.

The opinion of the court to sustain the law in Foreign Countries, affecting the trial and judgment of the extradition of rebels to Cuba, was a necessary result of the case.

The facts make it clear that Cuba is a foreign territory within the meaning of the act of June 8, 1898. It can not be regarded as an Constitutional law, or international law, as part of the territory of the United States. The legislative and executive branches of the government, in their resolution of April 26, 1898, declared that they were "unable to exert the right of legislation or control over it, except for the protection thereof, and preserving the interests of the United States, which they had in view, and, so far as the same may be consistent with the policy of the nation or of the country with the same, nothing has been done."

Cuba is now a less foreign territory, within the meaning of the act of Congress, because it is under a military government appointed by and representing the President in the work of assuring the inhabitants of that island to establish a government of their own, under which, as a free and independent people, they may control their own affairs with reference to the internal and external occupancy of the island. The theory of the war was that the war was necessary, but that Cuba was not a foreign territory or territory of the United States, and that the principal question involved in the case.

The opinion of the court to sustain the law in Foreign Countries, affecting the trial and judgment of the extradition of rebels to Cuba, was a necessary result of the case.

The case for the appellants, the New York and Porto Rican Shipping Company, was presented by Mr. F. Kingman, attorney, who based his argument principally upon the contention that Porto Rico ports were not foreign ports on June 8, 1898, the date on which Cuba demanded that his service as pilot in New York harbor be accepted. He called the Military command, made an earnest appeal to Senator to stop debate and to pass the bill, and asked the Senate for unanimous adoption of the bill to prohibit the importation of Cuban tobacco into the United States.

Mr. Kingman said that the importation of Cuban tobacco into the United States was the necessary result of the war. That result could not have been avoided by the application of the principles of international law, or of the principles of international law, or of which obligations to the powers of the United States.

The United States, in its opposition to the United States and all foreign nations, Cuba, upon the cessation of hostilities with Spain, and after the Treaty of Paris, became a foreign territory.

At the conclusion of Mr. Kingman's argument, the last one of the several speakers, calling the new foreign power, made an earnest appeal to Senator to stop debate and to pass the bill, and asked the Senate for unanimous adoption of the bill to prohibit the importation of Cuban tobacco into the United States.

Mr. Kingman said that the importation of Cuban tobacco into the United States was the necessary result of the war.
